

SEÑORA &
MOJAVE

CHUCKWALLAS

Chuckwallas are desert-dwelling reptiles native to North America that have adapted remarkably to arid environments. They have many great adaptations that help them survive the harsh desert conditions. Chuckwallas have a unique strategy for movement, instead of moving quickly they excel at camouflage, utilizing their rough-textured scales to blend seamlessly with the surrounding rocks. They can also effortlessly tuck themselves into crevices and narrow spaces between rocks, further enhancing their stealth skills.

HENRY VILAS ZOO